

Prelude to A New World-War

For five years, Israel has openly threatened with war with Iran, as no other country is being allowed to express a threat against another, without being criticized by the international community. What makes me think that it is approaching seriousness?

One of the circumstances was that Israel finally stands with the back against the wall, with the World slowly understanding that the Zionist State never thought of peace with its Palestinian sovereigns but endless talks were just a shelter for continued expansion of their colonial strives towards Greater Israel. The offence towards its great supporter, with the announcement of large settlements in Eastern Jerusalem during the visit of their humblest supporter, the self-announced 'Christian Zionist' Vice-President Joseph Biden, calls for distraction (obviously not for renouncement). But then, what raised my attention was the announcement of the transfer of American bunker-blasting bombs to the Island of Diego Garcia for explicit use of Israel in their attack on Iran, in an Article on March 17, 2010 in Haaretz [1]. Was the Island, portrayed below, to be involved in the Israeli warfare?

Possibly, but three days later, the report was modified: the ammunition, containing radioactive uranium [2], was sent towards Israel (according to a contract from January), but in a rare response to the Israeli insult, President Obama had diverted the transport to the Island [3]. Nevertheless, the reported urgency ought to raise your eyebrows: Defence Minister Ehud Barak had submitted a list of the items Israel required urgently standing up to a four-front assault by Iran and its allies - mainly air force ordnance, certain types of missile and advanced electronic devices. Barak made it clear that all these items must be present in Israel before the outbreak of hostilities. The requests were so urgent that the minister proposed that if Washington was reluctant to hand them directly to Israel, they could be stored for the interim in the big American emergency depots in Israel's Negev. Even without this immediate physical presence, the Israeli agents in the White House will soon have obtained the release - which does not necessarily mean, that the bombs will be transported to Israel.

Diego Garcia

The island of Diego Garcia is located in the Indian Ocean, about 1,600 km south of the southern coast of India [4]. In the 1960ies, the British government, to which the Island was now entrusted, forced the deportation of all 2,000 inhabitants to adjacent Islands, first of all French Mauritius, making room for an American-British airbase. It has been used for the attacks on both Afghanistan 2001 and Iraq 1991 and 2003. The American base is probably to some extent used as prison for alleged terrorists and has been mentioned in connection with the controversial extraordinary rendition of prisoners.

An Iranian Nuclear Bomb?

Israel and its allies claim that Iran experiments with building an atomic bomb. Iran denies that and insists its interest in nuclear fuel is limited to nourish power stations, to which it is permitted according to the nuclear proliferation treaty. The same also permits the enrichment. Russia is building the first Iranian nuclear power plant, Basher near Isfahan. Russia also agreed on delivering anti-aircraft missiles, foreseen in the coming summer 2010 [5] - perhaps that is what raises the Israeli sensation of urgency?

The Iranian President, Ahmadinejad, recently stated, "Iran doesn't need nukes, they haven't helped Israel" [6]. That is probably not true. Israel, the small country, behaves like the biggest threat to the world. Possibly, the illogical support this aggressive and racist society experiences in countries known for their high humanist and antiracist standards is perhaps explained through threat from our 'ally' [7].

Israel is not a signatory to the non-proliferation act and is supposed to possess 200-400 nuclear war heads. Personally, I am not worried about the eventual possession on atomic bombs in Iran, whereas the ones in Israel should be reason for great concern. It is simply beyond imagination that Iran would ignite such a bomb in Palestine; therefore, it might be considered a necessity to be taken serious by the Western powers and dealt with in a decent way. However, at the moment, there are no signs that they are behaving in this direction – except the eternally repeated claims in the mainstream media. This is a copy of the wrong translation ('wiped off from the map' [8]) and the misinterpretation of Mr. Ahmadinejad's referral to the alleged Israeli roots in Biblical ages.

The False-Flag Attack

Presently, I believe the Israeli government will hold back a direct attack by themselves, in spite of proper support by their friends (the Iranians will recognize the manufacturer of the bombs). Instead they will give priority to some sort of a false-flag attack, as nearly all modern wars are starting with. The most probable will be caused by an Israeli submarine (partly presented by the German government), known to be present in the Persian Gulf. By use of a conventional torpedo, one of the many, predominantly American marine vessels in the Gulf will be attacked, expecting this to be regarded an Iranian attack on a NATO-member. If so, there will soon be occasion for the well-equipped Iranian forces to take action against the many ships trapped in the Persian Gulf beyond the narrow Strait of Hormuz, and nobody will talk again about Palestine for the next many years.

And if this does not happen?

Let the bombs stay with the Americans; let the Iranians build their power-plants; let even the Israeli masters of destruction talk about peace with their victims; let even me excuse myself for a wrong prophecy

But first, let us see.
